Week In Review

This week I encountered nothing of real significance. I am happy to have completed all of my work faster than expected within my time estimation worksheet, and am also glad to have completed all the items on my burn-up list properly; with exception to the format to my burn-up list.

Anchor Points

1. What have you done?

This week I researched my favorite websites to understand what makes a site aesthetically pleasing, and then using that I made a concept sketch for the layout of my blog.

2. What are you doing?

Right now I am refining my time management skills to better manage my school, work, and personal relationships; it has been a far more difficult challenge to wisely invest my time then I initially thought.

3. What's Next?

I didn't have time to practice CSS like I had mentioned in my anchor points last week, so this week I hope that I can find time to accomplish that.

4. How will you accomplish this?

I will accomplish this by practicing more effective time management skills than I chose to employ last week, and through grit and determination.

Reflect and Connect

This week was a very busy week for me in non-school related ways so I didn't have time to truly cognitively engage myself in the content as much I would have like, which also burdened my extra-curricular learning which is why I wasn't able to complete the CSS self-education like I had hoped. I am excited moving forward though, by practicing time management skills I will hopefully be able to fit in my self-education
